Dear Friends,

The past month has given excellent proof that I am neither a meteorologist nor a prophet. After I declared summer was over, we had the nicest couple of weeks we have had all year. The nice weather has been enjoyable, but with the hope that I am proven wrong again, I think that was the last of it for the year. Temperatures have dropped in the past week. I had to fire up the pellet stove again, and morning has been frosty. During the month of September, I had the privilege of preaching a series of special meetings at Cornerstone Fellowship Baptist Church in Shingleton. Over the course of four days we examined several of the great gospel passages in the New Testament. I think the week was a great reminder of just how amazing God's saving grace is. We didn't stop at salvation, but went on to learn what our daily and lifelong response to salvation should be. I believe those who attended were blessed and encouraged by God's Word. The day after those meetings, I headed over to Lake Ellen Baptist Bible Camp to preach at their fall men's retreat. The weekend was an excellent time of fellowship and study. I challenged the men from the life of Samson, as we examined his selfishness and the resulting damage it caused in his ministry and to the testimony of God.

The first and last Sundays of September I spent in Hancock at Copper Country Bible Church. Several things of interest are taking place there, the most important of which relates to the search for a pastor. The IBM mission board will be interviewing Kyle Knell (the previous pastor's son) in a couple weeks. If they accept his application, Kyle will be moving up to Hancock to carry on the leadership of the church. Please be in prayer for the interview process and possible transition. I will be preaching there every Sunday in October except the first. The first Sunday of October I will be filling in for Pastor Jolls at Limestone Baptist. I do appreciate your continued prayers for us as we travel many miles each week and seek to minister to churches.

Home schooling has started up again, and the kids are once again getting their minds intentionally filled with knowledge. The process is sometimes painful, but they are surviving and at times even enjoying it. Keep Ruth in your prayers as she seeks to pass onto them the essential information they need to know so they can progress in their education.

In Christ,

Dave Chambers
